

The President's Message

The APA Conference in San Diego is right around the corner. I hope you can join us this year for the opportunity to attend the excellent program and reconnect with colleagues and friends.

In this issue you will see the program for Division 54 and Division 53, both of which have a wide range of interesting presentations and discussion opportunities. Also included is our program for the Hospitality Suite, which will be in the San Diego Marriott Hotel. I encourage you to stop by the Hospitality Suite for the programming or to simply put your feet up, take a break from the conference, and visit with your colleagues.

We have an outstanding conference program again this year. This year's theme focuses on the impact of poverty and diversity on all aspects of research and practice. Dr. Ellen-Marie Whalen will give the Division 54 invited address entitled "Emerging Healthcare Policy: Impact on Children, Care and Families." Her presentation will focus on the impact of the newly passed healthcare legislation on prevention, access, care, and reimbursement for service provision for the families at highest risk, especially those from low income and ethnically diverse backgrounds.

Dr. Whalen is a senior policy fellow at the Center for American Progress in Washington, D.C. She is also a noted scholar and seasoned nurse practitioner with many years of experience working in pediatric chronic illness. I am pleased that she has agreed to join us at the conference to share her insights about the new healthcare legislation. The invited address is on Saturday from 11:00-12:00, so be sure to get it on your conference calendar.

Other diversity programming includes a symposium addressing numerous diversity-related issues in practice and research entitled "Diversity Across School, Community and Clinical Settings," which will be held Saturday from 9:00-10:00. My presidential address, entitled "Why Diversity Matters," will focus on issues of poverty and health in children. Please plan to attend the address and business meeting on Saturday from 3:00-5:00 and then join us immediately afterward for the Internships/Postdocs on Parade Social Hour at the San Diego Marriott.

The conference is also an opportunity for us to broaden our professional networks and make new friends. I encourage each of you to make an extra effort to reach out to the students who will be attending the conference by welcoming them, introducing them to your colleagues, and helping to identify opportunities for the students to become more involved and assume leadership roles within the Division and the profession.

I will see you in San Diego!

Daniel L. Clay, Ph.D.
SPP President

JPP Editor Update

Journal of Pediatric Psychology Highlights

The Journal of Pediatric Psychology (JPP) continues to have a good pace of submissions with 85 thus far in the first four months of 2010. The average turnaround time for initial reviews is also excellent at 30 days. The average time between acceptance of a manuscript and publication in Advance Access is about five weeks.

We have continued to emphasize special topical issues and sections. The first issue of 2010 featured a section on Quality Improvement Methods in pediatric settings and populations edited by Lori Stark. Issue 5, which is coming out in May, provides a comprehensive overview of state of the art research articles on the Health Consequences of Child Maltreatment, edited by Jennie Noll and Chad Shenk.

Other special issues in progress include Health Care Transition of Adolescents and Young Adults with Pediatric Chronic Conditions, edited by Lisa Schwartz and Ahna Pai; and Family Assessment in Pediatric Psychology, edited by Melissa Alderfer and Lamia Barakat. A new call for papers on Rural Health in Pediatric Populations, edited by David Janicke and Ann McGrath Davis, is due September 1, 2010. In addition, a call for papers on Research Ethics in Pediatric Psychology has been issued, with a due date of October 1, 2010.

Our talented group of associate editors have all been busy managing manuscripts for JPP's ongoing sections on randomized controlled trials, health care disparities and diversity, methodology, prevention, single subject designs and clinical intervention, family influences and adaptation, and innovations in technology. Articles in these content areas will continue to have priority. A survey of SPP members indicated strong interest in publishing more articles on clinical intervention. We are particularly interested in submissions on this topic.

We have published editorials to highlight important topics such as in issue 2 (2010) Integrating Research and Practice (Drotar), Enhancing Clinical Significance (Rapoff), issue 3 (2010) Ethical Issues in Peer Review (Palermo) and Submission and Review of Multiple Articles Derived from the Same Study (Drotar). An upcoming editorial will focus on the need for replication.

Please let me know if you have topics for special issues, commentaries, or editorials, or have suggestions regarding journal operations. Finally, I want to thank all of you who are on the editorial board, reviewer panel, and have provided adhoc reviews. Your help is much appreciated. I can be reached at dennis.drotar@cchmc.org.

Denny Drotar, Ph.D.
JPP Editor

Call for Papers: Special Issue

Research Ethics in Pediatric Psychology

Research in pediatric psychology has grown increasingly complex with respect to prospective methodology, involvement of multiple family members, measurement, interventions with populations at risk, and inclusion of biologic data. Such work raises important ethical issues that need to be articulated and studied.

In order to stimulate and advance work in this area, JPP will publish a special issue on the ethics of research in pediatric psychology. This issue will include original research related to research ethics, innovative conceptual analysis of ethical issues, and scholarly, critical reviews on topics involving research ethics. Examples include defining risks and benefits in research with children and families, parental permission, consent and assent, family decision making related to research, researcher-family communication concerning research, regulating and compliance issues, use of incentives, ethical issues in research on prevention and intervention, ethical issues in measurement of behavior, identification and management of psychological distress in a research context, special ethical issues involved in genetic testing, discussion of genetic information in a research context, and use of genetic information to guide clinical care. Address inquiries to Dennis Drotar at dennis.drotar@cchmc.org.

Rural Health in Pediatric Populations

Reducing the geographic disparities in disease occurrence and in the availability of preventive health services represents a high national priority as outlined in the objectives of Healthy People 2010. Despite this "encouragement," health issues related to youth from rural areas receive scant attention in the research literature.

In order to stimulate research in this area, the Journal of Pediatric Psychology will publish a special issue on rural health in pediatric populations. While submissions may employ a wide range of methodologies and designs including case, descriptive, prospective, and intervention studies, we are particularly interested in the following: 1) dissemination of interventions targeting pediatric populations in rural settings, especially those interventions that address unique cultural, social, economic, and geographic characteristics of rural populations, and 2) studies that examine or explicate health behaviors and health outcomes in youth from rural settings, or that compare health behaviors and outcomes in rural and non-rural youth.

Deadline has been extended to September 1, 2010

Address inquiries to David Janicke at djanicke@phhp.ufl.edu or Ann McGrath Davis at adavis6@kumc.edu.

2010 Division 54 Award Winners

Martin P. Levin Mentorship Award

Elissa Jelalian, Ph.D.

The Martin P. Levin Mentorship Award was given to Elissa Jelalian, Ph.D. This award, sponsored by SPP and the Levin Foundation, honors a pediatric psychology faculty member who mentors students in an exemplary way, providing professional advice and guidance through various phases of training including early-career development.

Jelalian is an associate professor of Psychiatry and Human Behavior and Pediatrics at the Alpert Medical School of Brown University. She holds appointments at Bradley Hasbro Research Center and Miriam Hospital Weight Control and Diabetes Research Center.

Jelalian's research program focuses on development and implementation of weight control interventions for children and adolescents, as well as evaluation of state-wide policy to promote healthier school nutrition and physical activity environments. Her research has been supported by the NIH since 1999 and has had a national impact on the study of behavioral weight control interventions for adolescents.

For the past 15 years, she has provided outstanding mentorship to pre-doctoral interns and postdoctoral fellows through the Brown University Clinical Psychology Training Consortium.

Logan Wright Distinguished Research Award

The Logan Wright Distinguished Research Award was given to Patrick McGrath, Ph.D. This award recognizes excellence and significant contributions in establishing the scientific base of pediatric psychology.

McGrath is vice president for research at the IWK Health Centre and professor of Psychology, Pediatrics and Psychiatry at Dalhousie University. He is a leading researcher on pediatric pain and distance treatment to increase access to psychosocial health care. McGrath's research has been recognized by appointment to the Order of Canada and election to the Royal Society of Canada and the Academy of Health Sciences of Canada.

McGrath has received numerous other awards including the Martin P. Levin Mentorship Award from the Society of Pediatric Psychology. He is on the Governing Council of the Canadian Institutes of Health Research. He is the principal investigator of the CIHR Strategic Training Program on Pain in Child Health and a CIHR Team Grant in Access to Child Mental Health Care.

McGrath has published over 350 articles, book chapters, abstracts, comments and editorials, 13 books, and five internationally translated and distributed patient manuals.

Lee Salk Distinguished Service Award

The Lee Salk Distinguished Service Award was given to Lewis Paeff Lipsitt, Ph.D. This award recognizes service to the field of pediatric psychology, including public or political advocacy or leadership.

Lipsitt is professor emeritus of Psychology, Medical Science, and Human Development at Brown University, serving as Brown's Research Professor of Psychology, where he is continuing research on children (now adults) he followed since their day of birth, originally as part of the National Collaborative Perinatal Project.

Lipsitt founded a neonatal sensory and learning laboratory at Providence Lying-In Hospital and Brown's Child Study Center, where many publications with students and colleagues originated.

Lipsitt held Guggenheim and Cattell Fellowships, and expanded his research to include developmental perturbations, including crib death (SIDS), regarding these as failures of self regulation. He described some developmental problems as behavioral misadventures that kill and debilitate more young people than all diseases combined.

A cherished collaboration with Lee Salk was completed, studying effects of adverse perinatal conditions on adolescent suicide.

Routh Early Career Award in Pediatric Psychology

Jill MacLaren Chorney, Ph.D.

The Routh Early Career Award was given to Jill MacLaren Chorney, Ph.D. This award recognizes significant contributions to the field of pediatric psychology in research, clinical training, and/or service during the early career.

MacLaren Chorney is an assistant professor of Anesthesia at Dalhousie University and a psychologist with the Pediatric Complex Pain Service at the IWK Health Centre in Canada. She completed her Ph.D. at West Virginia University, her pre-doctoral internship at Brown University, and her postdoctoral fellowship at Yale University.

MacLaren Chorney's current research focuses on the care of children around the time of surgery, particularly on adult influences on children's preoperative anxiety and postoperative pain. She studies psychological interventions for acute and chronic pain and is part of a multisite study evaluating group-based cognitive behavioral treatment for adolescents with chronic pain.

MacLaren Chorney's work is funded by the National Institutes of Health, the Canadian Institutes of Health Research, and the IWK Health Centre. She has published over 30 peer-reviewed articles.

Members' Corner

By Christine Chambers, Ph.D.

We were delighted to learn via our membership survey last year that the vast majority of our members are very satisfied with their membership in SPP. We also received constructive feedback that was shared with the board and the various individuals in charge of our different member benefits.

We have been working hard to meet the needs of our members. We know our members were very happy to learn of the return of the National Conference on Child Health Psychology (April 14-16, 2011 in San Antonio, Texas). Members are now also able to renew their memberships online via the SPP website—no more snail mail!

Many of our member survey respondents also commented that they would like to know how they could become more involved in SPP activities. We received comments like “It is not clear how I could become more involved in SPP activities.”

There are many different ways for members to become involved in SPP. We have numerous committees that welcome input and participation by our members. One such committee is the Diversity Committee, chaired by Dr. Celia Lescano, Member at Large, Diversity. The goals of this committee include: promoting diversity in pediatric psychology research and clinical care, increasing the number of SPP members from diverse backgrounds, and providing services and resources for SPP members who are members of underrepresented groups. For more information, visit www.societyofpediatricpsychology.org/diversity/.

We also have an active Membership Committee, chaired by me, Dr. Christine Chambers, Member at Large, Membership, that consists of various SPP members who help to brainstorm ideas about member recruitment, retention, and engagement. SPP is often in need of reviewers for our student award competitions and for the submissions we receive each year for our APA program.

If you are interested in learning more about ways you can contribute to SPP, please contact me (christine.chambers@dal.ca) or SPP Administrative Officer Karen Roberts at apadiv54@gmail.com to express your interest. We will coordinate putting you in touch with the various SPP committees and individuals who could benefit from your involvement.

We look forward to hearing from you!

Christine Chambers, Ph.D.

Health Equity and Health Care Reform

By Jessica M. Valenzuela, Ph.D., Celia M. Lescano, Ph.D., and Renee Robinson, Ph.D.

The Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act (PPACA) was signed into law on March 23, 2010. Throughout PPACA, there are provisions highlighting a focus on health care equity that are aligned with the American Psychological Association's health care reform priority to “Eliminate Health Disparities.”

According to the Kaiser Family Foundation, PPACA's provisions to increase access to care are expected to result in an additional 10 million racial/ethnic minority Americans eligible for Medicaid. PPACA also provides funding for home visitation programs for at-risk families with young children, community-based collaborative care networks for low income families, and school-based health centers. Appropriate implementation is expected to result in improved access and integrated services (including behavioral health) for vulnerable families.

Training and research opportunities in health equity were also enhanced as part of PPACA.

Opportunities for capacity building in the health care system and the development, evaluation, and implementation of model curricula for cultural competency are being funded through grants and loan repayment programs. In addition, federally funded programs will be required to collect data on race, ethnicity, sex, and disability status. The law also authorizes funding of research to develop measures of health equity in the quality of services.

Lastly, the elevation of both the Office of Minority Health to the Office of the Secretary, and the National Center on Minority Health and Health Disparities (NCMHD) to Institute status create the potential for resources and funding that have never before been realized. We submit that PPACA represents great strides in healthcare reform legislation and an important step forward in addressing health disparities. More work is needed to ensure effective implementation of the legislation and to emphasize physical and mental health equity.

APA and Division 54—San Diego

By Amy E. Baughcum, Ph.D.
Division 54 Program Chair, 2010

It is time for sunshine! The 118th APA convention will be held from August 12-15, 2010, in San Diego, one of the most beautiful coastal cities in the United States.

SPP's first-class convention programming will occur on all days of the convention and will predominately take place at the San Diego Convention Center and San Diego Marriott Hotel.

This year's highlights include a timely, invited address by Ellen-Marie Whelan, N.P., Ph.D., from the Center for American Progress. Also new this year, the Committee on Youth and Families and Division 54 have co-sponsored a two-hour session that will be followed by a discussion hour to attract faculty and trainees alike to further address this important topic. Another outstanding development this year is the inclusion of two jam-packed poster sessions that highlight the excellent work of our faculty and students. Student awards will be presented during this time.

There are many other noteworthy aspects of this year's program. Three symposia, offering CE credit, are not to be missed. First, in conjunction with APA's presidential focus on caregiving, we are presenting "Parenting Adolescents in Chronic Illness Contexts: Families Resilient and At-Risk." Second, for our trainees and fledgling pediatric psychologists, Christine Chambers, Ph.D. and three other faculty members will speak about their experiences and provide advice in their presentation. Third, we are excited to offer a symposium on a current hot topic in our field, "Using Health and Behavior Codes to Help Sustain Clinical Practice in Pediatric Psychology."

We will have four one-hour paper sessions focused on contemporary issues in pediatric psychology, cancer survivorship, diabetes management, and adolescent risk behavior. Additionally, we are offering a two-hour paper session on research across diverse settings and populations. Finally, we encourage you to attend the presidential address and awards ceremony on Saturday.

Similar to last year, Divisions 37, 53, and 54 will partner for the annual Internships/Fellowships on Parade. This is an excellent opportunity for students to network and gather information on internships and postdoctoral fellowships in child clinical and pediatric psychology. In addition, our Hospitality Suite will offer several informal discussions and presentations that should interest both students and professionals. This forum gives individuals the opportunity to discuss pertinent pediatric psychology issues in a relaxed setting. Refreshments will be available to attendees. Our division's social hour in the hospitality suite will take place Saturday evening following Internships on Parade.

This convention promises to provide a variety of educational presentations, interactions with colleagues across the country, and opportunities to enjoy the many diverse offerings of the city of San Diego, from its beaches and parks to its museums, restaurants, and nightlife.

See you all in San Diego this August!

Paths Toward Membership— Experiences from the Student Advisory Board

By Kristen Robinson, M.S.

Increasing SPP awareness at the undergraduate and graduate student level is the Student Advisory Board's major initiative. A large part of this effort is determining the answer to an important question: From where have our current student members come? Recently, several SAB members reflected on their course toward membership and involvement in Division 54.

"As an undergraduate psychology major, I was certain that I wanted to work with children, but a 100 percent clinical-child focus was not for me. I entered a graduate program that did not have a pediatric track, but did have a child focus and a health focus, so I blended the two and created my own pediatric experience. Once I joined Division 54, I was immediately connected to a world of professionals and students who shared my interests, which has provided me with numerous opportunities that are both validating and empowering." —Alli Smith, M.A., University of Rhode Island

"I started working with my undergraduate and master's advisor when I was in my second year of undergraduate training. She introduced me to pediatric psychology and encouraged me to sign up for membership in APA and the Society of Pediatric Psychology." —Katie Salamon, M.S., University of Wisconsin, Milwaukee

"After working on several studies with pediatric populations during my undergraduate training, I realized two things: First, how much I enjoyed working with children and their families, and second, how little I knew. In graduate school, I was lucky to be connected with a great advisor, who introduced me to SPP and the opportunities that it allowed for students specializing in pediatric psychology." —Margaux Barnes, M.A., University of Alabama, Birmingham

"I volunteered on the Hem/Onc floor of a local Children's Hospital in Chicago while I was an undergraduate, then worked on an intervention study for teens with Type 1 diabetes and their parents for a few years before beginning graduate school. My mentor is active in the society and is an associate editor of JPP. He attends the regional and national SPP meetings and encourages students to submit their research and to attend the conference." —Bonnie Essner, M.A., Loyola University Chicago

So what does this tell us? First, there are many paths to the same end: involvement in SPP. And second, these paths often involve networking and personal communication. So, if you're an advisor or mentor, talk to your students about the home they can find in SPP. Make sure your post-baccalaureate research assistants and undergraduate volunteers know that student memberships apply to them too! If you're a graduate student, get to know the undergrads with whom you're working, and give them the beneficial student-to-student mentoring many of us were fortunate to receive.

As always, the SAB is standing by, ready and willing to answer questions, offer suggestions, and provide any help we can. Contact me at kristen.e.robinson@vanderbilt.edu or NCR Coordinator Josie Welkom at jwelkom@gmail.com for more information.

APA Student Poster Award Competition

Division 54 is again sponsoring a Student Poster Award competition. Students who are members of the Society of Pediatric Psychology and who are first author of a poster to be presented during one of the Division 54 poster sessions at the APA Convention are eligible.

Student authors: please forward the final version of the poster, not just the abstract, to Paul Robins, Ph.D., at robinsp@email.chop.edu by July 15.

Three winners will be acknowledged at the convention with a blue ribbon on their poster and a prize of $50.

Call for Student Spotlight

SPP's Student Advisory Board is accepting nominations for outstanding graduate students in pediatric psychology. One student will be selected based upon his/her interest in pediatric psychology and contributions to the field. Only graduate students will be considered for this round of nominations. The selected student will be featured in the Student Spotlight section of Progress Notes. This is a wonderful opportunity to honor a graduate student and provide the student with exposure to Division 54.

A nomination form can be downloaded from the SPP website or may be requested. Please send the nomination form, a letter of recommendation, and the nominee's CV to Katie Salamon at ksalamon@uwm.edu or Elizabeth Schneider at elizabethschneider@gmail.com.

Submission deadline is July 15, 2010.

Student Spotlight Request

It appears that undergraduate involvement in pediatric psychology has grown over the last few years. There is no doubt that the contribution of undergraduate students in labs across the country is invaluable. However, there still seems to be a gap between undergraduates interested in pediatric psychology and involvement in professional societies. Most notably, the SPP Student Board has held yearly Student Spotlights targeted for undergraduate students specifically. While the graduate student calls are often inundated with applications for outstanding graduate students, there are few to no applications for outstanding undergraduate students. Since these outstanding graduate students had to come from outstanding undergraduates, why aren't there more applications for outstanding undergraduate students? What can we do as members of the student board, as professors, and as researchers to promote undergraduate involvement in professional organizations and pediatric psychology in general? We suggest that you start by nominating an outstanding undergraduate student for the Student Spotlight in an upcoming issue of Progress Notes.

Past SPP President Runs for APA President By Suzanne Bennett Johnson, Ph.D.

Suzanne Bennett
Johnson, Ph.D.

The Society of Pediatric Psychology was one of my first “homes” in APA. I joined when SPP was a section of Division 12. Back then, pediatric psychology was in its infancy and we were charting new territory. In many ways, I grew up with the Society, serving on the journal’s editorial board, as SPP President (1993), and co-chairing the first few national conferences on Child Health Psychology. I was honored by SPP not only as president but with its Significant Research Contribution Award (1996) and its Martin P. Levin Mentorship Award (2000).

SPP leadership experiences were invaluable as I began to work more broadly within APA—serving as chair of APA’s Board of Professional Affairs, chair of APA’s Board of Scientific Affairs, and now on APA’s Board of Directors. SPP leadership experiences also influenced my work as a health legislative aid for Senator Clinton and shaped my approach to serving as a medical school department chair.

For the first time in its 117 year history, APA has a strategic plan, with three goals. I am running for APA president because I am committed to these goals and want to help make them a reality.

1. Maximize Organizational Effectiveness. APA membership is aging; it is critical that we make APA a viable home for younger psychologists and be prepared to promote innovative training and application of psychology. Without the engagement of the next generation, APA will no longer be the strong force it is today.

2. Expand Psychology’s Role in Advancing Health. SPP members have always been leaders in integrated care. With the passage of mental health parity and health care reform, APA has the opportunity to play a larger role—assuring appropriately trained psychologists are an integral part of health care.

3. Increase Recognition of Psychology as a Science. Like most SPP members, I consider myself a scientist-practitioner. Childhood diabetes and medical regimen adherence are my particular areas of expertise. Although I have spent my research career on NIH interdisciplinary research teams, I have never felt psychology gets the recognition it deserves from my research colleagues or from the NIH. I want to use the APA presidency to address this issue on a larger scale than I have been able to do in my own scientific work.

Why I am seeking the APA presidency now? After 35 years in academia, I have given up my administrative duties to devote my time to research and service. I am grateful for my career as a psychologist and service to psychology is my way of giving back. I would be honored to serve as APA president and ask for your support.
